Yale Equal of Crimson in Princeton Comparison—Tender Tener League Presidency This Week

AGAINST THE TIGERS ELIS EQUAL HARVARD

THE CARLISLE BACK FIELD

In Distribution of Ability Among Four Men It Surpasses Any Other.

As compared to Harvard against Princeton Yaie did well against Princeton and made a showing which isn't without encouragement for next Saturday, although Yale will have to get some finishing touches to its offence to have any chance of crossing Harvard's goal line. The Harvard-Brown and Yale-Brown results to not won't being in danger. Harvard-Brown and Yale-Brown results do not point to Harvard being in danger next Saturday, but these are of less consequence than what Harvard and Yale did against Princeton, because the latter was opposition much more calculated to find the Crimson and Blue doing their hardest than were the Brown games.

In one way Harvard has the strategic position, so to speak, over Yale. The latter has only one week in which to recover from the trying contest with the Tigers, ter has only one week in which to recover from the trying contest with the Tigers, and only one week in which to take on the physical tone needed and take on improvement which is likely to be needed to buck against Harvard successfully. Between the Princeton and Yale games Harvard will have had two weeks of physical and playing preparation. In Harvard will have had two weeks of physical and playing preparation. In having two weeks between its biggest games, whereas Yale and Princeton had only one between their two, the Crimson schedule places the Harvard tegm at an schedule places the Harvard team at an apparent advantage. On the other hand there is the chance that the Princeton game may just round out Yale to her best form for the final game.

Yale played as good football against Princeton as Harvard did. The condition of the field was far better for Yale than for Harvard, but by the same token it was far better for Princeton. Granted that Harvard would have done better against Princeton on a dry field, the Tigers also might have benefited. The situation in this respect seems to nullify itself, though it may be that Harvard, with more inherent strength than Princeton, may have derived greater benefit from more suitable conditions.

That Harvard will be a stronger team

That Harvard will be a stronger team next Saturday than she was on the 8th present the best outlook for Yale seems to lie in the fact that the splendid defence shown last Saturday may keep Harvard from crossing the goal line by rushing and put it up to field goal kicking to decide the day, in which respect Yale has decide the day, in which respect that decide the day, in which respect that as the control of th skiiful as Brickley, is not to be reckoned

The play there is discussed in this fashion:

Some were inclined to criticise Wilson for lack of judgment in trying for a fer-ward pass when Yale had the ball within three yards of Princeton's goal line. The more conservative view of this play was that it was simply a tossup was sharing was sharing was sharing was the play to use. If Wilson had used a drop kick and it had failed, then many would have said that he should have used a forward pass. Puts Bandage on The Wrong Knee

ANN ARBOR, Nov. 16.—Brute Pontius, right tackle for Michigan, used his head as well as his nerve in playing against Pennsylvania Saturday. His injured knee made it doubtful if he could stay through the entire battle. Pontius soon discovered that the Quakers were aware of his weakness by the regularity with which they sprawled over his legs. In the second half Pontius limped on to the field with a fresh white bandage. Time after time some one fell on the knee. Pontius just smiled, and proceeded to get his man in the next formation. He had put the visible bandage on the wrong knee.

CARL MORRIS SCORES WILLARD AND SMITH

Ritchie Surprises Garden A. C by Waiving Claim to a $10,000 Guarantee.

While taking light exercise at the New Polo A. Morris is keeping in condition with the idea of fighting Wilard in the Garden on December 2, provided Willard can obtain reinstatement by the State Boxing Commission.

It is understood that a Buffalo promoter will withdraw his complaint against Wil-Round Davis last winter if somebody will hand over $500, spent in advertising. But Manager Gibson of the Garden A. C. said yesterday that he would not
